DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(c), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(c) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 11/27/2007 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.
3. Claims 18, 19 and 34-35 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Applicant's Admitted Prior Art in view of Yamada et al. (JP 2002-258299, provided in IDS).

As to claim 34, the Admitted Prior Art discloses a method of fabricating a liquid crystal display panel by forming a thin film transistor array substrate, forming a color filter substrate, dispensing a material through a plurality of syringes (301A, 301B, 301C) and their respective nozzles (302A, 302B, 302C) onto at least one of the substrates, and joining the substrates (Figure 3; sections [0012, 0016-0017]). The film transistor array substrate has a plurality of liquid crystal display panels and the color filter has a plurality of liquid crystal display panels ([0009] [0010], [0012] and Figure 1). It is unclear as to whether the Admitted Prior Art teaches a syringe having a plurality of nozzles where at least one of the nozzles can move with respect to a position of the body of the syringe where the material can be dispensed from the nozzles at the same time.

Yamada teaches it being known in the art of liquid crystal display manufacture to use a dispensing apparatus comprising a syringe having a body (8) for containing a dispensing material and a plurality of nozzles (10) at one end of the body to supply the material onto a substrate (Figure 1; section [0022] at top of p. 13). At least one of the nozzles can be moved with respect to the body to adjust the size of a dispensed pattern and the material can be dispensed from the plurality of nozzles simultaneously (Figure 5; portion of section [0010] at top of p. 10; section [0036]). This makes it possible to drop the liquid crystal in a specified pattern and quantity.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to use a dispensing apparatus where the syringe has a plurality of nozzles connected to it's body portion such that at least one of the nozzles moves with respect to the body and the plurality of nozzles dispense the material simultaneously when manufacturing the LCD panel of the Admitted Prior Art because such is known in the art, as evidenced by Yamada, where this allows one to drop the liquid crystal in a specified pattern and quantity.

One would appreciate using the dispenser of Yamada to drop liquid crystal into the plurality of liquid crystal display panels of the admitted prior art because they are arranged in a pattern and Yamada discloses a dispenser capable of simultaneously dropping the liquid crystal in a pattern.

As to claim 18, all the limitations were addressed above with respect to claim 34, except a connection portion to couple the nozzles with the body portion. Yamada teaches connection portion (11) (Figure 1; section [0022] at top of p. 13).

As to claims 19 and 35, the Admitted Prior Art in view of Yamada teaches such.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 11/27/2007 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. As to the argument regarding Yamada et al., one reading Yamada et al. would appreciate that the reference is not concerned with the particular liquid crystal display panel arrangement because the invention is concerned with the process in which liquid crystal is dropped. One would appreciate using the dispenser of Yamada to drop liquid crystal into the plurality of liquid crystal display panels of the admitted prior art because they are arranged in a pattern and Yamada discloses a dispenser capable of simultaneously dropping the liquid crystal in a pattern.
